“ All the brothers and sisters are gone now. All my aunts and uncles. Pauline and her first husband, Runner, were part of our childhood. My brother and I would come to Granite to visit our grandparents. I spent time with Pauline and Runner during those summer visits. She switched the store bought pasterized milk for fresh milk after I told her I would only drink the pasturized. Boy, that fresh milk was the best and I had to eat crow. Children, what do we know.
